Chris Turan has released working patches which enable the creation of CentOS 5 VE's.

We've got two production hosts running CentOS 5 with CentOS 5 VE's. No issues so far. Seems other people agree too.

FWIW, I've looked at the patch and it looks fine. Nothing too hacky apart from the udev disablement which is required.

Does anyone know if there is an reason why this has not yet been included in the official templates? (Support for CentOS 5 seems very slow, having been released 1 Year ago)
