Good Question,

The first thing any dedicated conversion will notice is the way ram is reported. I currently have my hosting done on a Virtuozzo, and I noticed right away that plesk always reports very little free Ram. So this is something you will want to make very clear is how much ram each user gets, and how it is allocated.

As far as general people to avoid, is anyone who thinks they can install Windows onto your VPS or want to change to a different distro every week. (that would be a great opportunity to sell them multiple accounts if you wanted to try that)

Hope that gives some insight
