Subject: Re: Re: 2.6.18-ovz028test015 and 2.6.18-ovz028test018 break IPv6
Posted by kir on Mon, 05 Mar 2007 08:35:58 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Wolfgang Schnerring wrote:
> * "Michael H. Warfield" <mhw@WittsEnd.com>:
>
>> This may not be an OpenVZ problem, per se, though. Some time in the >> very later part of the 2.6.18 kernel.org release updates, a problem was >> introduced that broke IPv6. Some patch or another caused nodes to fail >> to join the "all nodes multicast" (ff02::1) address. This is critical >> to IPv6 router discovery and advertisement, neighbor discovery, and >> autoconfiguration. All fall down go boom.
>>
>
> I've raised that same issue here: http://bugzilla.openvz.org/show_bug.cgi?id=476
>
> But even though Den Lunev found and backported the upstream patch (I > think from 2.6.20) that fixes the problem, I don't think this ever got into the > OpenVZ repository... any update on this?
As Kirill said in comment #4 to the bug, this patch goes to 028test019
-- which is not yet released.
So you either have to wait till we release 019 (or later) kernel, or use the patch from the bugreport.