
Subject: Re: Switch to new red hat 5 kernel
Posted by weycresto on Thu, 15 Mar 2007 12:14:27 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Kirill Korotaev wrote:

> Martin,
>
> I guess Xen?
>
> Thanks,
> Kirill
>
>> Hi Kirill,
>>
>> sorry for the off-topic but as I seen the news post from Redhat they >> offer virtualization with RHEL5, GUI for management and other nice >> features. Do you have any idea what virtualization product they use for >> this purpose?
>>
>> Regards,
>> Martin

Yes, RHEL5 would support Xen "para virtualised guests OS's." It would be interesting to see if the Xen GUI tools become available in CentOS.

RH are recommending a minimum "physical memory" per active guest of 512MB.

I've always found the OS Virtualisation/shared kernel of Virtuozzo/OpenVZ more suitable for hosting and there is more control over resources.

--
Best Regards

Paul Lee
Operations Manager
Weycrest Solutions Limited
<www> www.weycrest.co.uk
