use the same vzsplit to create these configs.
it is better to create them once and use the same configs on all machines with predifined results rather then call vzsplit tool every time. I meant this.

Also it would be nice, if user had an ability to modify parameters of the default config, for those who want the details.

P.S. can you make a bit more fine grained screenshots please (it is impossible to read the text on current ones)?