just because u should in most generic case include gentoo baselayout-vserver into vzctl tarball to be sure u get/parsed it correctly. This nothing to do with minimal functionality provided at first startup it's all about more and more tricky configs. and even worse baselayout already has nothing to do with sysv-init thus nobody in gentoo should takes care to be compatible with the shell at all. It's unlikely but absolutely is not impossible if one day baselayout will be rewritten with hmm... python. what's wrong with python?
