Thanks,

that was precisely the answer I was looking for. Wasn't sure if doing that would work. I know it is messy but as I said in my posting, I have no way of creating a working installation by installing a set of RPMs.

But I do wish, packages would stick to a minimal set of directories when they install themselves. It makes package removal easy. Think it is time a nice XML based package manger was written with journalled install . We could also do with a database/LDAP based OS config data.

Thanks
