Subject: Re: [PATCH 0/2] resource control file system - aka containers on top of nsproxy!
Posted by Sam Vilain on Thu, 08 Mar 2007 00:53:05 GMT

Paul Menage wrote:
> But "namespace" has well-established historical semantics too - a way > of changing the mappings of local names to global objects. This > doesn't describe things liek resource controllers, cpusets, resource > monitoring, etc.
>
> Trying to extend the well-known term namespace to refer to things that > aren't namespaces isn't a useful approach, IMO.
>
> Paul
>

But "namespace" has well-established historical semantics too - a way of changing the mappings of local * to global objects. This accurately describes things liek resource controllers, cpusets, resource monitoring, etc.

Trying to extend the well-known term namespace to refer to things that are semantically equivalent namespaces is a useful approach, IMHO.

Sam.

_____
Containers mailing list Containers@lists.osdl.org
https://lists.osdl.org/mailman/listinfo/containers