Or, I would add, hire somebody to do that for you. That's what I mean by "a neighbour system administrator" in my post above. OpenVZ (and Linux in general) is indeed more like a Lego -- if you know how to connect pieces together, have enough time and attitude -- you can build nice and sometimes even amazing things...

But if you don't know how to connect those pieces, or playing games is just not what you want to do -- either hire somebody who can play those games for you, or use a ready solution from a commercial vendor; it comes in a nice package and with support contract from a commercial vendor.
