
Subject: Re: [RFC] Virtualization steps

Posted by dev on Tue, 28 Mar 2006 08:51:14 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

>> so IMHO, we should make a kernel branch (Eric or Sam >> are probably willing to maintain that), which we keep >> in-sync with mainline (not necessarily git, but at >> least snapshot wise), where we put all the patches
>> we agree on, and each party should then adjust the >> existing solution to this kernel, so we get some deep >> testing in the process, and everybody can see if it
>> 'works' for him or not ...

>

> ACK. A collection of patches that we can all agree > on sounds like something worth aiming for.

>

> It looks like Kirill last round of patches can form > a nucleus for that. So far I have seen plenty of technical > objects but no objections to the general direction.

yup, I will fix everything and will come with a set of patches for IPC,
so we could select which way is better to do it :)

> So agreement appears possible.

Nice to hear this!

Eric, we have a GIT repo on openvz.org already:

<http://git.openvz.org>

we will create a separate branch also called -acked, where patches agreed upon will go.

Thanks,
Kirill
