
Subject: Re: AW: vzdump to restore to a specific location

Posted by jarcher on Wed, 05 Dec 2007 06:12:19 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Thanks Dietmar...

I changed the path for the DUMPPDIR line in the global conf file, but when I ran vzdump it still used the old value. Is there something I have to reload to get the new value to take?

--On Monday, November 26, 2007 10:08 AM +0100 Dietmar Maurer <dietmar@maurer-it.com> wrote:

> vzdump currently uses the value from the global config (/etc/vz/vz.conf).

>

> I will add this feature request to my todo list.

>

> - Dietmar

>

>> -----Ursprüngliche Nachricht-----

>> Von: users-bounces@openvz.org

>> [mailto:users-bounces@openvz.org] Im Auftrag von Jim Archer

>> Gesendet: Sonntag, 25. November 2007 03:22

>> An: users@openvz.org

>> Betreff: [Users] vzdump to restore to a specific location

>>

>> Hi All...

>>

>> Is it possible to use vzdump --restore in such a way that the >> files are placed back in a particular location? I tried

>> --dumpdir but that made no difference. VZDump keeps putting >> the files into a location different than where they came from.

>>

>> I realize I could restore and then move the files, but I am >> trying to automate this.

>>

>> Thanks...

>>
