Subject: Re: 028stabXXX is no more security supported - unsupported? Why?
Posted by TheWiseOne on Tue, 27 May 2008 14:11:10 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

1. You should use the RedHat based kernels. This is what will be supported.
2. The difference is the kernel they are based off of and what is actively maintained. I believe the reason for basing off of RedHat kernel is that all the hardening and security update work is already performed by RedHat which offloads work from the OpenVZ developers.