

---

Subject: Re: 028stabXXX is no more security supported - unsupported? Why?

Posted by TheWiseOne on Tue, 27 May 2008 14:11:10 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

1. You should use the RedHat based kernels. This is what will be supported.
  2. The difference is the kernel they are based off of and what is actively maintained. I believe the reason for basing off of RedHat kernel is that all the hardening and security update work is already performed by RedHat which offloads work from the OpenVZ developers.
-