Subject: RE: openvz tcp&networking tunning
Posted by Zhaohui Wang on Thu, 29 May 2008 16:50:19 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Thanks,Andreas.

Since I can not use this values to tune my application,is there any other mechanism to do this in openvz,more specificly, is there a way to do rate control/management for VEs?

Thanks a lot

Best Regards
Zhaohui Wang

> -----Original Message-----
> From: users-bounces@openvz.org [mailto:users-bounces@openvz.org] On > Behalf Of MailingListe
> Sent: Thursday, May 29, 2008 6:22 AM
> To: users@openvz.org
> Subject: Re: [Users] openvz tcp&networking tunning
>
> Zitat von Zhaohui Wang <zwange@gmu.edu>:
>
> >
> >
> > Hi all
> >
> > Can anyone tell me that how to use tcpsndbuf,tcprcvbuf,dgrmbuf to > > tune the container's networking?
> >
> > What's the unit of such parameters,Bytes or Kbyte,if I changed them > > to bigger or smaller ones,what will happen?
>
>
> These are resource values. If you set them too small your applications > inside the VE will not work if you set them too high your > Hardware-Node may run out of steam.
> The values cannot be used as performance tuning for your applications!!
>
> Regards
>
> Andreas
>
>
> --
> All your trash belong to us ;-) www.spamschlucker.org

> To: stephan@spamschlucker.org
>
>