
Subject: Re: 2.6.24 soon in debian stable?

Posted by Alexander GQ Gerasiov on Mon, 16 Jun 2008 09:07:02 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Sun, 15 Jun 2008 12:23:07 +0200

Alexander Prinsier <openvz@aphexer.mailhaven.com> wrote:

> Hello,

>

> Debian has planned the release of lenny in September [1], with it's > freeze coming in mid July. Will the openvz patch for 2.6.24 be > considered stable by then? Or is it still highly experimental? What > are you planning to do with lenny?

>

> If not stable by then, all debian openvz users would be forced to > either stick with etch, or use an older version of the kernel with > lenny. The problem with the second is that there won't be any > official security support, so I'd like to avoid going that way.

1. Debian Lenny will include 2.6.26, not 2.6.24

2. It's looks like OpenVZ will be included.

3. As I can see 2.6.24 openvz005 is stable enough, so I use it without problem (and provide pre-built debian packages from my repo).

--

Best regards,

Alexander GQ Gerasiov

Contacts:

e-mail: gq@cs.msu.su Jabber: [gq@jabber.ru](jabber: gq@jabber.ru)

Homepage: <http://gq.net.ru> ICQ: 7272757

PGP fingerprint: 0628 ACC7 291A D4AA 6D7D 79B8 0641 D82A E3E3 CE1D
