But it would seem that mounting a directory in the host does not actually mount the directory in the container.

no, that was the different and not OpenVZ-specific problem.
Files under /var/run directory may be removed at the beginning of the boot process. So, restarting a particular VE led to the removing files under /var/run/mysqld directory and in consequence of this action other VE were affected too, because /var/run/mysqld was a bind-mount.
