Hello,

there is not a single subdirectory under `"/var/lib/vz/"` directory called "private". For example there is the `"/var/lib/vz/template"` directory where templates' data locate. Its size depends on how many templates you're going to use. It wouldn't be a very huge in your case but who knows...

Anyway, this is not a problem at all. When a new container is being created you can use `--private` and `--root` parameters which make `vzctl` utility reside private and root areas of the container being created where you want them to be.
