

---

Subject: Re: PCI Passthrough

Posted by divB on Mon, 07 Sep 2009 22:57:02 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

No, this won't be possible by concept!!

OpenVZ is an OS-level virtualization. That means that there is exactly one kernel and set of modules which are shared amongst all VEs. This is NOT like Xen!

Using a PCI device inside a VE depends on the device driver. You can load the driver only on HN!

Usually you will get a device node to access your device. In this case you can make the devicenode be accessible from a VE.