Subject: Re: Vzctl and VPS variables
Posted by kir on Wed, 14 Jun 2006 14:25:45 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Note that /etc/profile is for interactive shells. From the bash(1) man page:

Quote:When bash is invoked as an interactive login shell, or as a non-interactive shell with the --login option, it first reads and executes commands from the file /etc/profile, if that file exists.

So, /etc/profile is not the correct file to set up environment used by non-interactive scripts. See man bash or info bash for more info.