Has anyone tried Linux Containers? It's supposedly the result of a lot of code contributions from the OpenVZ Team. And this has been part of mainline since 2.6.27.

I don't believe that KVM is the logical next step from openvz (if it is indeed dead). But it could well be LXC.

Of course, the best solution would still be for us to have an OpenVZ patch for 2.6.31/32. It would really help remove some apprehension from us openvz adopters if something would be said about it's future by its creators.
