Hi,

Thanks for the reply - Yes it is so odd I cant cant fugure it out. Without openvz on the server "ie clean centos install" there are no problem with network at all. Even after openVZ is installed there are no problems until randomly one container which is built in the same was at the other test ones just start to mess things up. For a while I thought it was IP realted (one IP not configured somewhere or doing something silly with the switch) but I have ruled this out as on different occations different IPs cause the problem...

Cheers
Ben
