Subject: Re: Swap Usage
Posted by hello-world on Thu, 22 Jun 2006 13:10:36 GMT

kir wrote on Thu, 22 June 2006 06:13It's not the machine which crashes, it's your application.

That's not entirely correct. It is indeed teh machine that crashes. It is killing off my application.

Quote:

All the other questions should really be directed to your provider -- it's their job not ours, hope you understand that.

I contacted my provider, and spoke to them, but they said that per vps swap is not possible, and that swap is global.
My question is: If so, how can we ensure quality of service. A provider can use large amount of swap and sell it as memory. If you don't distinguish between RAM and Swap, how can a company make sure that the Service Levels Agreements are met?

Anyway, thanks a lot for your time.