Hi Folks

I just wrote a little tool which might be useful for you and thought I ought to drop some lines here:

vzlimit is a small console application which allows you to list and set container resource limits in a very comfortable way in human readable units. Currently, only RAM and Diskspace (privvmpages, diskspace) are available, other parameters will follow.

The installation is quite simple, you just need the ruby interpreter and a few libraries.

If you do have any feedback (features, bugs) I'd love to hear it:

Have fun!
