
Subject: Re: problem with veth feature..

Posted by dev on Mon, 26 Jun 2006 08:06:45 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

If you compiled kernel yourself then check that you enabled CONFIG_VE_ETHDEV option.

If you took binary kernel from openvz.org then check that you have loaded the required kernel module:

```
modprobe vzethdev
```

Thanks,
Kirill

> Hello,

>

> I'm trying to use the new features of openvz (veth...) but i encounter > problems... i have this kernel :

>

> phoenix:~# uname -a

> Linux phoenix 2.6.16-026test014 #1 Fri Jun 23 13:29:16 CEST 2006 i686

> GNU/Linux

>

> (compiled myself)

>

> and version 3.0.10 of vzctl :

>

> phoenix:~# vzctl --version

> vzctl version 3.0.10

>

> i run 2 PV'S :

>

> phoenix:~# vzctl status 101

> VPSID 101 exist mounted running

> phoenix:~# vzctl status 102

> VPSID 102 exist mounted running

>

> when i try to add veth on a VPs i have this error :

>

> phoenix:~# vzctl set 101 --veth_add > veth101.0,00:12:34:56:78:9A,eth0,00:12:34:56:78:9B --save

> Processing veth devices

> Warning: veth feature is not supported by kernel, skipped veth configure

> Saved parameters for VPS 101

>

> what can I do? Thank you!

>

> - Rachid
