
Subject: Re: Is there a stable OpenVZ kernel, and which should be fit for production

Posted by MailingListe on Wed, 23 Nov 2011 17:25:13 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Zitat von Kir Kolyshkin <kir@openvz.org>:

> On 11/23/2011 08:59 PM, Ist_hoe02@kwsoft.de wrote:

>> Zitat von Kir Kolyshkin<kir@openvz.org>:

>>

>>> On 11/23/2011 04:31 PM, Dariush Pietrzak wrote:

>>>> I am very sad to hear this. Could you please file a bug to >>>> bugzilla.openvz.org so our kernel guys will start working on that?

>>>> Looking at bugzilla there are many other similiar reports, one >>>> of mine has >>>> been closed as fixed, but then returned in exactly the same function after >>>> just 6 minutes of stress-testing new kernel.

>>>> It's easy to reproduce, just put enough load on the system.

>>> Have you reopened it already? Can you provide bug number?

>>>

>>>> It looks really troubling, both vSwap and 042.x branches look very nice >>>> feature-wise, even vzmigrate seems to work fine, which is no small feat, >>>> but it kinda feels like stability has been sacrificed to get there.

>>>>

>>>> best regards, Eyck

>>> Guys,

>>>

>>> I do understand reasons for your frustration, but so far I have only >>> seen one specific bug mentioned in this thread, namely

>>> <http://bugzilla.openvz.org/2095> it was filed yesterday and there is >>> a patch already available for testing. Any other statements like

>>> "there are many bugs", "this kernel is unstable" are just not >>> specific enough for me to deal with.

>>>

>>> If there are bugs, they need to be reported and fixed, and we,

>>> OpenVZ team, partly rely on you, our users. We do have internal QA >>> but can't possibly test all the use cases and scenarios.

>>>

>>> Specifically, we rely on having bug reports from you, with full >>> kernel logs (see http://wiki.openvz.org/Remote_console_setup), test >>> cases (as specific and reproducible as possible), and ideally your >>> ability to test patches that developers provide and report your >>> results back to bugzilla.

>> Okay, can someone with a bugzilla account please confirm and create a >> bug with this one:

>

> Pardon my curiosity, but why you need someone to act as your proxy > filing bugs into bugzilla? I mean, I could create a bug, then a > developer will ask you for some additional info, and I will have to > ask you and then copy/paste your reply to the bug report, and so on > and so forth. Why make things more complicated?

>
> Bugzilla accounts are free and instant, just go to > <http://bugzilla.openvz.org/createaccount.cgi> and enter your email.

I already have countless accounts at numerous bugzilla/forums/whatever, so i try to avoid creating throw away accounts (Karteileichen) as much as possible. As some of the developers must confirm/reproduce the bug anyway it was may impression it would be smart to avoid just-another-account-somewhere.

But if it helps, so it be

Regards

Andreas

File Attachments

1) smime.p7s, downloaded 523 times
