Subject: Re: What is OpenVZ container scheduling granularity Posted by MailingListe on Wed, 21 Dec 2011 16:24:35 GMT

Zitat von shule ney <neyshule@gmail.com>:

> Much thanks Kirill, I really appreciate your reply! My question is:
> Suppose two containers exist on my machine which can use 0%-100% CPU, each > of them has only one active process. If I sleep one container's process for > 1us which makes this container has nothing to do, will the the container be > scheduled off and the other container gets scheduled? Is 1us too small for > container scheduling?? I want to know if this case is possible. Thanks very > much.

OpenVZ is shared Kernel so you must think of scheduling per process(-group) like in a conventional Kernel, not per container.

Regards

Andreas

File Attachments
1) smime.p7s, downloaded 439 times