
Subject: Re: occasional high loadavg without any noticeable cpu/memory/io load
Posted by Rene Dokbua on Tue, 22 May 2012 17:09:05 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

On Tue, May 22, 2012 at 7:54 PM, Esmé de Wolf <esme@elements.nl> wrote:

> You could check your <VEID>.conf with vzcfgvalidate. But I think there is > quite a risk when giving one of your CT's unlimited resources. If you want > to read-out the UBC's from the node and see when one fails I could > recommend you a very good script I'm using myself; > http://wiki.openvz.org/UBC_failcnt_reset There is no need to reset the > value's inside your CT. ****

>

>

>

Apparently no problems with the file:

```
vzcfgvalidate -v yes 1407.conf
Validation completed: success
```

Thank you to everyone who provided suggestions, ideas and insight. I've added the user_beancounters to my loadmonitoring script. Next time there is a problem I'll check if any values are hitting the limit and see if increasing them may fix the problem.

Best,
Rene
