Thanks for point out and yes, I am aware of what you mean.

The original problem started when I have one physical IP and two virtual IP (bind to same physical NIC), after installing openvz and reboot, can no longer access network unless I stop the iptable service. Remember that at this point, I have not started any configuration or even create the VE.

Though I could eventually get the network to function (see previous email), I can not give myself a good explanation still.

Also, as you advise earlier, why should I remove the two virtual IP to get the network to work again ?

Just trying to satisfy myself the true cause. I google and found a few others had exact problem like me but did not see any good explanation yet.
