
Subject: Re: Kernel 3.2 / Debian 7 hypervisor
Posted by grin on Fri, 16 Sep 2016 10:40:26 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Well newer libc simply will reject old kernels (as well as udev and some other stuff). Since upgrades are blocked I have to get rid of openvz. That's sad because lxc is still an unstable pile of glorified chroot, but I won't go into "compile everything again for myself" game. And it's well integrated into the kernel and it doesn't relate to redhat.
