Subject: Re: Kernel Issue
Posted by HaroldB on Fri, 29 Sep 2006 22:42:23 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

You don't have to fix it. All that means is that rpm is worried that the driver may no be present. However, the driver is built into the kernel (theres no way to know whats in the kernel without booting it) and the driver is not a module. Bottom line, you can disregard the warning message and boot off that kernel.