Are named-based VPS really even possible? Do other VPS systems allow them?

It seems to me that http is the only protocal this would work for.

ssh, mail, etc. have no way to determine the host

You can NAT things out over the same IP but I did not know it was possible to do it incoming (unless each VPS is using a different port).