Well, i've sead that user_beancounters doesn't report any problems.

The thing that puzzles me is that all apache servers on all vps's died more or less at the same time.

The only thing common to all is that all of them are using the same template (fedora core 5) and the same modules loaded. If some module is causing trouble it's the same problem in all of them.

The only module added by me that is not standard in apache is mod_security. But that one didn't cause problems in the past.
