

---

Subject: Re: [ckrm-tech] [RFC] Resource Management - Infrastructure choices
Posted by Chris Friesen on Tue, 31 Oct 2006 16:33:14 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Pavel Emelianov wrote:

> Paul Jackson wrote:

> I agree, but you've cut some important questions away,

> so I ask them again:

>

> > What if user creates a controller (configs directory) > > and doesn't remove it at all. Should controller stay in > > memory even if nobody uses it?

>

> This is important to solve now - whether we want or not to > keep "empty" beancounters in memory. If we do not then configs > usage is not acceptable.

I can certainly see scenarios where we would want to keep "empty" beancounters around.

For instance, I move all the tasks out of a group but still want to be able to obtain stats on how much cpu time the group has used.

Maybe we can do that without persisting the actual beancounters...I'm not familiar enough with the code to say.

Chris

---