
Subject: Re: [PATCH, try3, 0/3] Separate logfile and console loglevel

Posted by Mishin Dmitry on Thu, 07 Dec 2006 13:21:30 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

On Thursday 07 December 2006 15:47, Igor Sukhih wrote:

> Kir Kolyshkin wrote:

> > Kristian F. Høgh wrote:

> >> If I type "vzctl set 1001 ...", I would assume everything went OK, > >> if I get no output.

> >>

> > Agreed, this is true UNIX way :)

> Lets do not display any info messages by default, go by UNIX way :)

Probably, global poll helps? ;)

I think, the default console level is secondary question indeed.

Split of console level and log level is usefull. So, my opinion is to leave default level AS IS, because somebody may use this output somewhere in his scripts (it's bad, but who knows these users? ;)).

Kristian may intro alias in his shell in order to decrease level to `no output` value.

--

Thanks,
Dmitry.
