

---

Subject: Re: [PATCH, try3, 0/3] Separate logfile and console loglevel
Posted by kir on Thu, 07 Dec 2006 13:23:42 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Dmitry Mishin wrote:

> On Thursday 07 December 2006 15:47, Igor Sukhih wrote:

>

>> Kir Kolyshkin wrote:

>>

>>>

>>>> If I type "vzctl set 1001 ...", I would assume everything went OK, >>>> if I get no output.

>>>>

>>>>

>>> Agreed, this is true UNIX way :)

>>>

>> Lets do not display any info messages by default, go by UNIX way :)

>>

> Probably, global poll helps? ;)

>

> I think, the default console level is secondary question indeed.

> Split of console level and log level is usefull. So, my opinion is to > leave default level AS IS, because somebody may use this output > somewhere in his scripts (it's bad, but who knows these users? ;) ).

> Kristian may intro alias in his shell in order to decrease level to `no output` > value.

I'd rather have a config option than an alias.

---