
Subject: Re: gentoo baselayout 1.13 openvz modifications

Posted by hollow on Fri, 26 Jan 2007 16:43:26 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

On Friday 26 January 2007 17:02, Roy Marples wrote:

> On Mon, 22 Jan 2007 17:58:05 +0300

>

> Kir Kolyshkin <kir@openvz.org> wrote:

>> I was checking the stuff added to Gentoo's baselayout 1.13 to make it >> compatible with VPS systems like Linux-VServer or OpenVZ.

>>

>> Everything looks great, the only minor problem I found is this code

>> in bootmisc:

>>

```
>>     if [[ $(uname) == "Linux" ]] && ! is_vps_sys ; then
```

```
>>         # BSD has it's own sysctl init script
```

```
>>         if [[ -e /etc/sysctl.conf ]] ; then
```

```
>>             ebegin "$Configuring kernel parameters"
```

```
>>             sysctl -q -p /etc/sysctl.conf
```

```
>>             eend $?
```

```
>>         fi
```

```
>>     fi
```

>>

>> The problem here is in OpenVZ some of sysctl variables are >> virtualized, i.e. you can set it from inside your VE. Usually this is >> not needed, and not too many people do that, but still if there >> is /etc/sysctl.conf people expect that it will be applied during VE >> start.

>

> Hollow asked for that for a reason. I'll assume that he's on the > vserver-devs@gentoo.org mailing list and he'll tell me why.

>

> Otherwise I have no problem with punting it myself.

>

> Thanks

>

> Roy

Yeah, we can punt that...
