Subject: Re: gentoo baselayout 1.13 openvz modifications Posted by hollow on Fri, 26 Jan 2007 16:43:26 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

```
On Friday 26 January 2007 17:02, Roy Marples wrote:
> On Mon, 22 Jan 2007 17:58:05 +0300
>
> Kir Kolyshkin < kir@openvz.org> wrote:
>> I was checking the stuff added to Gentoo's baselayout 1.13 to make it >> compatible with VPS systems like Linux-VServer or OpenVZ.
> >
>> Everything looks great, the only minor problem I found is this code > > in bootmisc:
> >
         if [[ $(uname) == "Linux" ]] &&! is_vps_sys; then
> >
              # BSD has it's own sysctl init script
> >
              if [[ -e /etc/sysctl.conf ]] : then ebegin $"Configuring kernel parameters"
> >
                   sysctl -q -p /etc/sysctl.conf
> >
                   eend $?
              fi
> >
         fi
> >
> > The problem here is in OpenVZ some of sysctl variables are > > virtualized, i.e. you can set it from inside your VE. Usually this is > > not needed, and not too many people do that, but still if there > > is /etc/sysctl.conf people expect that it will be applied during VE > > start.
>
> Hollow asked for that for a reason. I'll assume that he's on the > vserver-devs@gentoo.org mailing list and he'll tell me why.
>
> Otherwise I have no problem with punting it myself.
> Thanks
> Roy
Yeah, we can punt that...
```