Subject: Re: gentoo baselayout 1.13 openvz modifications Posted by Roy Marples on Fri, 26 Jan 2007 16:02:15 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

On Mon, 22 Jan 2007 17:58:05 +0300 Kir Kolyshkin <kir@openvz.org> wrote: > I was checking the stuff added to Gentoo's baselayout 1.13 to make it > compatible with VPS systems like Linux-VServer or OpenVZ. > Everything looks great, the only minor problem I found is this code > in bootmisc: if [[$(uname) == "Linux"]] &&! is_vps_sys; then > # BSD has it's own sysctl init script > if [[-e /etc/sysctl.conf]]; then > ebegin $"Configuring kernel parameters" > sysctl -q -p /etc/sysctl.conf > eend $? > fi > > fi > The problem here is in OpenVZ some of sysctl variables are > virtualized, i.e. you can set it from inside your VE. Usually this is > not needed, and not too many people do that, but still if there > is /etc/sysctl.conf people expect that it will be applied during VE Hollow asked for that for a reason. I'll assume that he's on the vserver-devs@gentoo.org mailing list and he'll tell me why.

Otherwise I have no problem with punting it myself.

Thanks

> start.

Roy