I thought it was my mistake, but I have just checked that vzpkg does NOT require vzyum. It requires yum though which is valid, so you need to install yum. The answer to the question "where to find yum" depends on the distribution you use, so if you tell me the distro I will tell you where to find yum.

Still, can you please post here the exact command you typed to install vzpkg rpm, and the exact output of this command (the error you mentioned).

Hey ok, i put.

rpm -ivh /filefolder/name.rpm

it says

Warning: /fillname.rpm: V3 DSA signature: NOKEY, Key ID a7a1ad4b6

error: Failed dependencies:

```
    yum >= 2.2.1 is needed by vzpkg-2.7.0-17

Im running Fedora core 2 i686.

Shock, please, always provide enough information if you want some help really:
- what commands you type
- what services fail
- what messages were printed otherwise it is hard to help. Really. Thank you.

Also, please, note that FC2 is too old and little people were testing it with OVZ, you will have much less problems if install FC4 or CentOs.

I have the same error warning: vzpkg-2.7.0-18.noarch.rpm: V3 DSA signature: NOKEY, key ID a7a1d4b6
error: Failed dependencies:

vzyum >= 2.4.0-5 is needed by vzpkg-2.7.0-18 but I can't find the vzyum 2.4.0-5 the only one on the site is vzyum-2.4.0-11
