

---

Subject: Re: [PATCH 2/7] Containers (V8): Cpusets hooked into containers
Posted by Paul Menage on Wed, 25 Apr 2007 04:59:40 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

On 4/23/07, Vaidyanathan Srinivasan <svaidy@linux.vnet.ibm.com> wrote:

```
> >
> > config CONTAINERS
> > - bool "Container support"
> > - help
> > - This option will let you create and manage process containers,
> > - which can be used to aggregate multiple processes, e.g. for
> > - the purposes of resource tracking.
> > -
> > - Say N if unsure > > + bool
>
> Hi Paul,
>
> This looks like some patch generation error. Description for > containers should not be removed after applying this patch.
```

No, this is intentional - in the first patch in the series, CONFIG_CONTAINER was a user-selectable option so it had a description; in the second it becomes an option that's only selected if other selected systems (e.g. cpusets) depend on it. So it no longer needs help text.

Cheers,

Paul

---