Subject: Re: stab069.6 kernel not stable
Posted by khorenko on Thu, 15 Jul 2010 18:53:33 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Quote:Once again, I am no kernel expert but memory leak in a kernel = bad based on what I know! Once again call me crazy but I generally don't want production servers running "stable" kernels that are probably not so stable when they have memory leaks.
i'll tell you a small secret: the same bug exists in RedHat kernel which is a base for our kernel. And it was there long ago. Did you notice it? i believe - no, just because it happens really very rare.
Seriously, EVERY software has errors. And i'm afraid this is not going to change.
BTW, this is a forum for those who are ASKING for help.

--
Konstantin