More, you can oversell disk space.

BUT. There is one problem. Some applications like RPM use df output for determining whether they will succeed. So df should not report more space than there is *really* physically available on the disk.

So if you have only 1Gb free on /vz, and set 100Gb limit on all your VEs - ok, but df will still show MAX 1GB free.

If you still want to show more - do a small patch for kernel, but I informed about potential problems.
